

Deb Hope has been one of British Columbia's broadcasters for the past three decades as a reporter and news anchor - and was recently awarded the Order of Canada for her outstanding contributions to journalism and public service through her hard work for community charities.

She is beloved by British Columbians for her common touch - able to tell heart-warming and hard-hitting stories alike. She has won the trust, respect and affection of British Columbia through hard work, talent and commitment to story telling.